I am a frontend-developer student who has a keen interest in simple design, intuitive UI and accessibility. My studies are carried out at Noroff university, and I will be graduating in March 2027. I am currently looking for an internship or a part-time job, where I can develop my frontend-skills and grow as a developer. I am eager to learn and embark on a career within frontend-development.

Presently, I have acquired skills in HTML, CSS and Vanilla Javascript and will be progressing with frameworks during 2026. As part of my studies, I have developed three individual projects that can be viewed on my portfolio website. All code has been written using VSCode and all three designs have been created using Figma. All three projects are hosted with GitHub pages. I also have experience with the use of AI for more efficient workflow and knowledge acquirement.

Prior to starting my frontend education, I have six years of work experience where I worked as a consultant for 3 years, and as a laboratory engineer for 3 years. Working as a consultant I gained valuable experience in project management and client deliverables, which is a skill that will be valuable as a frontend developer. I became proficient in time management, hosting project meetings, and further developed my communication skills. As a laboratory engineer, I worked with the binding agents in asphalt. During the asphalt season the workload would increase significantly, with higher demand for sample analysis and support to depots for quality assurance. This has taught me the importance of task prioritizing and keeping your cool when in a busy work environment. This too, is a skill that will come in handy as a frontend developer working on multiple projects, or towards a deadline with limited time.

I am highly motivated to learn and develop my skills as a frontend developer. I find the field both fun and interesting, and I am looking forward to putting my skills and experience to good use! In a part-time job I would be available to start promptly, while in a full-time role, the starting date can be discussed as I can conduct the remainder of my studies part-time.
